Where are the jobs these days in New York City?

Shift work. NYC lost 50,000 financial jobs. They were replaced by jobs in health care, tech and retail.

New York City may be buzzing with job growth, but not necessarily on Wall Street.

Last week, a new report by the Partnership for NYC found the city lost 50,000 financial services jobs — many of them mid-level — from 2000-2013, leaving many lamenting the supposed fall of Wall Street and wondering what industries are growing as financial sector jobs decline.

"In terms of financial services, we are not actually losing jobs," said Alicia Glen, deputy mayor for housing and economic development. "The convergence of technology into these other industries begins to blur the lines. We're seeing an explosion in 'fintech,' and tech has infected in a good way all these traditional industries."

New York City added 14,000 private sector jobs in May, according to the New York State Department of Labor.

Health care and social assistance jobs saw the most growth over the last 12 months, adding 23,500 jobs in the city. The professional, scientific and technical services industry increased by 14,700 jobs during the same period, and retail added 12,800 jobs.

From April to May 2015, arts, entertainment and recreation added the most jobs — 3,300 — while both administrative services, and health care and social assistance jobs added 3,200 jobs each. The information field lost 1,200 jobs, manufacturing lost 1,100 jobs and wholesale trade jobs fell by 900.

Glen said the city believes the future of technology is in New York with its diverse business and commercial capital scene, not a suburban office park. The city is also focusing on expanding life science jobs for New Yorkers.

The deputy mayor said "you don't have to have a Ph.D. in molecular physics," and that lab techs with two-year degrees can make a good living.

Glen said the city is also invested in preserving the traditionally strong creative economy, and promoting a $15-an-hour wage for employees in the retail sector.

A report last winter by City Comptroller Scott Stringer found that although the city's job growth rate had hit a 25-year high, the majority of the jobs added were low-paying.

"We feel we're diversifying New York City away from pure financial services," Glen said, adding the de Blasio administration is focusing on New Yorkers empowering themselves and advancing their careers.

For Kathryn Wylde, president of Partnership for NYC, which put out the Wall Street jobs report last week, the city can't afford to lose the financial sector jobs, which also feed other top industries such as technology.

"Many of the jobs in high-grossing areas like tech and professional services are dependent on the financial services industry," Wylde told Metro. "The heart and core of our economy and the economy of any great world city is the financial and investment sector.

"The elected representatives of Detroit defend car manufacturing, Texas defends oil … we'd like to have the same kind of support from the representatives of New York."

Belles of the ball looking for sugar daddies

Sugar daddies at the ball / SEEKING ARRANGEMENT

Ah, romance. A masquerade ball brings together sugar babies with sugar daddies and their wallets.

In a cavernous dance club on 48th Street, a masked sugar daddy had his wealthy arm draped over the shoulders of a Vice reporter as he whispered sweet nothings in her ear. Despite being told she was a reporter, he hadn't grasped the fact that she was more interested in his story than his wealth.

When the sugar daddy finally realized that there were two sets of cameras, a sound guy, a producer and yours truly watching, he released the reporter and left in a huff, the heat of his anger likely burning all his sugar.

"If I end up online I'm coming for ya, I'll slit your f—ing throat," he threatened from outside the makeshift corral before walking away.

Some sugar daddies aren't so sweet when it comes to their privacy.

The sugar daddy and sugar baby masquerade ball, hosted by dating website Seeking Arrangement, is something of a phenomenon with hundreds of young women — and a few young gay guys thrown in — using the dance party as an opportunity to find a source of love and wealth. With some Sugar Daddy VIP ticket bundles selling as high as $3,000 a pop, Metro went undercover to find out exactly who the events attracts. Sure enough, what we found was that sugar daddies are mostly old, mostly white and more often than not, unattractive — conventionally so, at least.

However, the unmasked sugar daddy I interviewed in a press room was only one of those three things — white.

"It's just made life so much easier. Think about it. How do you meet dates?" Dean, a handsome 29-year-old professional gambler and casual sugar daddy, asked me. "You either don't, or you have to meet them through your job, or through a friend of a friend of a friend and hope to get lucky. Whereas with this, it's just low effort to meet girls I'm attracted to who are down for me. It's dating on easy mode."

Prior to the masquerade, Seeking Arrangement hosted a Sugar Baby Summit, which was a series of talks on subjects such as "Sugar 101," style and beauty, and "Funds Management," which really should have been called "How to avoid raising red flags with the IRS."

During the summit, I spoke with Kristen, the speaker for Sugar 101 and a sugar baby success story, about what her motivations for sugaring were.

"I had my tuition paid and I had the rest of my student loans paid off," Kristen explained as a matter of fact. "I currently have my cellphone bill, my rent and my car insurance paid by one man. He doesn't actually give me money, he just pays the bills for me."

If there was one thing that was harped on the most throughout the seminar, it was that despite receiving an "allowance" in these "mutually beneficial relationships," sugar babies are not escorts.

"Escorts are paid for sex. We're paid for just — it doesn't even have to be our time," Kristen explained. "With an escort, you do have to be with them to get your money. I don't have a sexual relationship with all of my sugar daddies."

Mermaid Reunites Long Lost Lovers

The perils of the sea are no match for the mermaid's treasure known as aquamarine.

Ever since ancient times, sailors have sworn by aquamarine as a talisman and protector for anyone traveling on the open water. According to legend, aquamarine originated in the treasure chest of mermaids, and has since ancient times, been regarded as "the sailor's lucky stone."

We've heard the legend of men heading out to sea with an aquamarine amulet around their neck and once they safely return, that same stone becomes a ring for their sweetheart. That romantic tradition is carried forward in our stunning Aquamarine Ice Ring.

Derived from the Latin words for "water of the sea," the refreshing blue aquamarine gemstone is embraced by a polished, .925 sterling silver setting and surrounded by shimmering white Diamond*Aura*®—our signature lab-created stone. You get the full effect of the aquamarine in a stunning 1.40 carat emerald cut, which floods the icy blue color with waves of brilliant light.

Aquamarine has excellent clarity and transparency. In fact, a member of the beryl family, aquamarine is a sister of the rich green emerald. And, with it's gorgeous baby blues, it's easy to see why the emerald may get a tad green with envy.

You can easily find one carat aquamarine rings for over $5,000 at Fifth Avenue jewelers. Bringing you luxury for less is our mission at Stauer, so we priced our Aquamarine Ice Ring so you can make a splash without shelling out too many clams.

No need to test the waters. Slip this remarkable ring on her finger and create a legend of your own without risking the perils of the sea.

Your satisfaction is 100% guaranteed. Wear the Aquamarine Ice Ring for 60 days and if you're not completely delighted, send it back for a full refund of your purchase price. So, go ahead and make a splash!

Q&A. Isaac Oliver talks about his book 'Intimacy Idiot' and PrEP

When it comes to getting intimate, comic writer Isaac Oliver is no idiot. His hysterical debut book, "Intimacy Idiot," is a collection of essays, vignettes, poems, lists and diary entries that document the poignant, hilarious and awkward moments of intimacy between humans.

Metro caught up with Oliver on the phone, during which he discussed writing and his thoughts on PrEP.

Are you excited for Pride? Do you have anything planned?
I am! I'm doing a big show with some friends of mine at the Bell House on Sunday the 28th that's Pride Sunday and it's called "Pride at the Bell House." I'm co-hosting it with my friends John Early, Cole Escola and Ham Sandwich. We have Julie Klausner and Jemima Kirke from "Girls" as special guests. so it should be really fun! I don't have a ton planned but you know I'll be wearing sunscreen and lots of layers in June; I'll be feeling prideful.

Do you just live and write about it? How do you find these moments in "Intimacy Idiot?"
The book is sort of a collection of things that happened over several years. It's not like they all happened in the span of two insane months! I don't sort of seek out stories per se, and I'm certainly not on Grindr thinking, "Oh, he looks dramaturgically exciting."

Can you describe an "Intimacy Idiot?" How do I know if I am one?
Well, I would never call you an intimacy idiot. I would never call anyone else that! It's self-identifying. For me, it's about the very New York experience of being intimate with a large group of people sitting in total silence on a bus or on a subway. But then what happens when you're in a room alone with someone? It's that moment of opening your mouth and speaking to one person that just feels so backward to me — of just my ability to sort of be in a crowd or large group of people or on a stage reading these stories to an audience and feeling completely comfortable, but then sitting at a restaurant table with a handsome man and not really knowing how to conduct myself.

Should we be excited to turn 30? Are the 20s all that great?
No, you should be excited to turn 30. I think our 20s are like the true adolescence. I think that they are just like acne-ridden and sweaty in weird places. Being 24 to 29 was really hard for me, so I'm pleased to be in my 30s now, actually. I think you grow a lot. You are not the same person at 29 that you were at 24.

Isaac Oliver / GETTY IMAGES

Question

Will your show mostly be about 'Intimacy Idiot?'

I'll probably read a few pieces; I'm going to try to write a couple new things. MATT LEE, METRO

Weekend shootings leave 3 dead, 10 hurt in Philadelphia

Three people were killed and 10 others wounded in a wave of unrelated shootings across Philadelphia on Saturday night.

Three children — including a 1-year-old girl — were among the 10 people injured when gunmen let loose a volley of birdshot at a packed cookout in Mantua, Philly.com reported.

The men fired into the 4100 block of Ogden Street around 10 p.m. Saturday night.

Seven adults as well as two boys ages 11 and 12, were also hit. All were in stable condition Sunday, the website reported.

Shortly after, a 21-year-old man was killed by gunfire at 37th and Mt. Vernon streets, about a mile from the block party.

Two other men were killed in separate incidents at two different bars early Sunday, according to Philly.com.

In North Philadelphia, a 25-year-old man was shot inside Johnny Ace Place, near 29th and Chalmers, around 1:50 a.m., police said. No arrest was reported.

In Olney, a 29-year-old man was shot and later died at the scene outside Old Madrid bar on North Fifth Street shortly before 2:30 a.m., police said.

A suspect is in custody, but no charges had yet been filed Sunday, according to the website.

Hunt for escaped murderers heats up

Richard Matt and David Sweat / HANDOUT

Manhunt. The search is centered on Friendship, New York, located about 280 miles southwest of the New York prison.

Quoted

"We're continuing to search still. We'll stay in the area until the lead is exhausted."

Spokesman Beau Duffy

Hundreds of law enforcement officers stepped up their search in western New York state for two convicted murderers who escaped from an upstate prison more than two weeks ago, as a third possible sighting of the men was reported in the area.

Police set up a search perimeter in the Friendship area, in New York's so-called southern tier along the border with Pennsylvania, after two reported sightings on Saturday.

A civilian told police that he believed he saw two men fitting the descriptions of the escaped convicts, Richard Matt and David Sweat, walking along a road in Friendship on Sunday morning, the Buffalo News reported.

The newspaper did not disclose how it learned about the reported sightings and a spokesman for the New York State Police declined comment on the report.

State troopers and other officers were searching an area in Friendship mostly covered with dense forests and dotted with a few houses and barns, the newspaper said.

Sweat has roots in the region and may have relatives who live in and around Canisteo, about 35 miles east of Friendship, according to the newspaper.

The reported sightings of Matt and Sweat, who are on the U.S. Marshals Service's list of 15 Most Wanted Fugitives, follows the suspension of a corrections officer at Clinton Correctional Facility in connection with the escape.

Another prison worker, Joyce Mitchell, is accused of assisting the escapees. Mitchell, 51, a training supervisor in the prison tailor shop who is charged with giving hacksaw blades to the pair, lost her nerve to drive their getaway car and instead checked into a hospital with a panic attack, authorities said.

The Foreman forecast

TOM FOREMAN

TOM FOREMAN PREDICTS THIS WEEK IN POLITICS. HE IS A CNN CORRESPONDENT AND AUTHOR OF THE UPCOMING BOOK "MY YEAR OF RUNNING DANGEROUSLY: A DAD, A DAUGHTER, AND A RIDICULOUS PLAN."

THAT'S A HOT ONE

At long last, summer has roared into the nation's capital, making everyone sweat like Rick Perry at a RuPaul picnic. (Yeah, I know, he's never gone to something like that, but seriously, it would be fantastic!) Then again, maybe it's not the heat. Some big waves are heading for the D.C. beach, and they're bringing my three things to watch this week in politics.

1. SURF'S UP AT SUPCO

All eyes are on the Supreme Court in anticipation of a massive ruling on Obamacare that could come any day. If it goes against the White House, it could be a massive wipeout for the financial formula behind health care reform, sending the program into a "death spiral." You would think that would delight Republicans who have long opposed it, but there is deepening concern that millions of families could find themselves adrift and looking for someone to blame. Could get gnarly for the GOP.

2. HEAT WAVE

In the immediate aftermath of the horrific shootings in Charleston, some lawmakers were stepping gingerly around the topic of guns, lest they be accused of unduly politicizing the tragedy. But you can expect talk on that topic to grow superheated now. This is a gimme for Democrats, who know they can come out strong for reform while never having to deliver, since new legislation stands virtually no chance of passing in large part because of Republican opposition. All the announced presidential contenders will no doubt be pressed on the issue, and Donald Trump ... oh heck, who cares what he does?

3. PASS THE SUNSCREEN

Expect blistering words on trade, security, human rights and more at the U.S.-China Strategic and Economic Dialogue. This will be a face-to-face meeting between representatives of the two biggest economies on the planet, and one of them stands accused of some nasty cyberhacking of late. Ahem ... China, do you have something you'd like to say about that? The U.S. says it won't be all lemonade by the pool, and to borrow from Buster Poindexter that means it could get "Hot, hot, hot!"

White House run

Rick Perry's lesson from 2012 US presidential bid: Be prepared

Rick Perry, the former Texas governor who is making a second run for the Republican presidential nomination next year, says he took away a major lesson from his failed 2012 bid: Be prepared.

The Boy Scouts motto is something Perry knows well as an Eagle Scout, the highest attainable rank in the movement.

But the conservative Perry, who announced his candidacy for the 2016 Republican nomination on June 4, said he was caught by surprise at the depth and breadth of knowledge presidential candidates were expected to have at their fingertips.

"Until you've done it you don't even realize what a challenge it is — these broad array of issues that you just have to have more than just passing knowledge of," Perry said in an interview on "Fox News Sunday."

The longest-serving governor in Texas history, Perry's 2012 candidacy fell apart in an embarrassing Republican debate performance when he could not remember the third of three government agencies he wanted to scrap, blurting out "Oops."

This time, the 65-year-old has presented himself as a more thoughtful, policy-oriented candidate, punctuated by thick-framed, wonky-looking glasses. REUTERS

Six things you need to know

1 Pope prays at Turin Shroud but skirts authenticity debate

Pope Francis prayed on Sunday before the mysterious shroud some Christians believe is Jesus' burial cloth but skirted the issue of its authenticity, saying it should remind people of all suffering and persecution.

On his first day of a visit to the northern industrial city of Turin, he defended migrants flocking to Europe to escape war and injustice, saying it "makes one cry" to see them mistreated.

He also spoke of the city's 19th century reputation as a center of devil worship and anti-clericalism, saying today's young people faced new snares of high unemployment, drugs and unbridled consumerism.

Francis was the latest of many popes to view the shroud, which is usually kept locked out of sight and is on display for only the third time in 17 years. Over a million people have seen it in two months.

After praying for several minutes before the cloth that has baffled scientists for decades, he touched its glass case and moved on to say Mass for 60,000 people.

The Roman Catholic Church has not taken an official position on the cloth bearing an image, reversed like a photographic negative, of a man with the wounds of a crucifixion. REUTERS

2 Tensions build as Supreme Court readies blockbuster rulings

Tensions are building inside and outside the white marble facade of the U.S. Supreme Court building as the nine justices prepare to issue major rulings on gay marriage and President Barack Obama's health-care law by the end of the month.

Of the 11 cases left to decide, the biggest are a challenge by gay couples to state laws banning same-sex marriage and a conservative challenge to subsidies provided under the Obamacare law to help low- and middle-income people buy health insurance that could lead to millions of people losing medical coverage. REUTERS

3 Suspect arrested in fatal shooting of New Orleans policeman

New Orleans police said on Sunday they had arrested the man suspected of shooting dead a city police officer who was transporting him to jail a day earlier.

Police said Travis Boys, 33, who was handcuffed, managed to grab a gun and fatally shoot Officer Daryle Holloway before escaping the police cruiser which crashed into a utility pole.

Holloway, 45, a 22-year New Orleans police veteran and a father of three, was found in his department vehicle with a gunshot wound and his prisoner missing. REUTERS

4 Pentagon to push allies to ditch 'Cold War playbook'

Defense Secretary Ash Carter will urge NATO allies to "dispose of the Cold War playbook" during a trip to Europe this week, as the alliance adapts to a new kind of threat from Russia and Islamic State.

Carter heads first to Berlin, where he is expected to call for a more muscular global security role from Germany. Germany remains hesitant to deploy troops abroad.

"He will encourage Germany, under the firm leadership of the minister of defense, to increase their security role in the world, commensurate with their political and economic weight," a defense official said. REUTERS

5 British business leaders plan campaign for EU exit

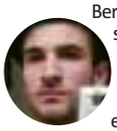
A group of British business leaders and entrepreneurs are preparing to launch a campaign for Britain to leave the European Union at a planned membership referendum, a major donor to the U.K. Independence Party said.

Prime Minister David Cameron has promised to renegotiate Britain's relationship with the EU ahead of a vote by the end of 2017, and is this week due to set out his reform plans in more detail at a summit of EU leaders in Brussels. REUTERS

6 Freak accident with marble slab kills NJ teenager

A New Jersey teenager died in a freak accident when he became wedged between large slabs of granite and marble outside a countertop store not far from his home, according to local news reports.

The body of the 17-year-old boy, who was identified as Jared Marchiano of Berkeley Township in local media reports, was found early Saturday morning.



It appeared the teen was trespassing when he somehow was crushed by a slab that was estimated to weigh approximately 650 pounds, the Asbury Park Press reported.

Authorities believe the death was accidental, but are trying to determine what led the teen to the counter store property, the news outlet reported. REUTERS

Mourning shooting victims, Charleston church reopens

United. Outside the church, a large, mostly white crowd gathered to express solidarity with those inside.

Hundreds of people packed a sweltering Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Charleston, South Carolina, for an emotional memorial service on Sunday just days after a gunman, identified by authorities as a 21-year-old white male named Dylann Roof, shot dead nine black church members.

"We are reminded this morning about the freshness of death that comes like a thief in the night," the Rev. Norvel Goff told a mostly black congregation.

Armed police searched bags at the door of the church, home to the oldest African-American congregation in the southern United States, and officers stood at intervals inside the church along the side of the nave and in the gallery.

Goff's rollicking sermon brought people alternately to tears and laughter as the church reopened to worshippers for the first time since the shooting. They whooped, cheered and raised their hands, and ended the service with embraces after Goff, whose voice rose to a shout at times, encouraged them to "hug three people next to you and tell them, 'It's going to be all right.'"

The suspect, Dylann Roof, was arrested on Thursday and has been charged with nine counts of murder. Authorities say he spent an hour in an evening Bible study group at the church, nicknamed "Mother Emanuel" for its key role in U.S. black history, before opening fire.

Federal investigators were examining a racist manifesto on a website that appeared to have been written by Roof. The site featured white supremacist writings and photos, apparently of Roof. REUTERS

1 Taylor Swift breaks up with Apple Music gently

Taylor Swift and new streaming service Apple Music are never, ever, ever getting back together. The service offers a three-month free trial and doesn't pay royalties for tunes enjoyed during that period. "These are not the complaints of a spoiled, petulant child," she writes. "We know how astronomically successful Apple has been and we know that this incredible company has the money to pay artists, writers and producers ... even if it is free for the fans. It is unfair to ask anyone to work for nothing." Maybe Spotify isn't looking so bad now?

Take that, Apple. / ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

2 Chris Brown teases further baby plans

Happy belated Father's Day! You know who recently became a father? Chris Brown. "My main focus now is just my music, but my daughter first," Brown says. "I'm doing it all for her." It's good to see that Brown took that "Simpsons" episode about Maggie's birth to heart.

Also, he's thinking about giving baby Royalty a sibling. "Maybe [another kid] five or six years from now possibly so she won't be an only child," he says. "I've got brothers and sisters and I had a fun time picking on them. They were beating me up too, so my daughter needs a sibling." Hoo boy.

That's a glad dad.

Laverne Cox wants men who love trans women to get some love

ANYONE UP FOR IT?

Between herself and Caitlyn Jenner, Laverne Cox has seen lot of positive moves in transgender visibility, but there's one area she still thinks is lacking. "Most men who are attracted to and date transgender women are probably stigmatized more than trans women are," Cox says during a SiriusXM interview. "I think a man who is dating trans women, who is a celebrity or famous or is an athlete or something, needs to come forward and needs to say, 'I love transgender women and [they] deserve to be loved and I'm going to declare that publicly.' I think those men need some sort of inspiration and hope, so they can live more authentically." So, any takers?

It's hard out there for a Dildo Throne

North London resident Ralph Jones won a 6-foot-4 replica of the "Game of Thrones" Iron Throne festooned black rubber dildos in a contest. It was perfect, except it being too big to fit in his house. Instead of just warming up with some stretching, Jones got a fellow fan to take it off his hands via eBay. There was only ever one bid, but that was enough, and now Jones can sit a bit more comfortably at home.

"Fraction Of An Inch" Success And Failure With Popular

Vital Information All Knee Arthritis Sufferers

By Matt Edgar-Health Writer
Manhattan - In just a moment I'm going to tell you about a very "candid" and somewhat embarrassing moment I had with a doctor.

A moment most doctors would not want you to know about.

As I reveal what happened in that moment - it will become clear to you not only why this doctor has so much success treating knee arthritis pain... but you will also discover a possible way to relieve some or all of your pain, too.

But before I tell you all that - let me ask you this: How would you like to finally have a real medical solution for your knee arthritis pain?

Not some scam sold on an infomercial or the internet. A real medical treatment that has already worked for countless people just like you and is covered by most insurance and medicare?

Can you imagine what it would feel like to be able to eliminate enough of your pain and stiffness so you can get out of bed without pain and go for walks and even do things like play golf or tennis?

How relieved would you be if you felt so much better that you no longer needed to go through total knee replacement surgery and all the grueling rehabilitation?

Sounds Too Good To Be True?

I'm glad we agree. It does sound too good to be true. That's because all patients react differently and get different results from real medical treatments.

That's also why no ethical doctor would promise or guarantee ANY results... for ANY treatment. EVER.

In fact - if you do start hearing over-the-top, exaggerated claims like: "cure for knee arthritis" or "eliminates all pain" or "works for everyone" you should run like heck.

But the fact of the matter is: If you qualify for the treatment you are about to discover, there is a good chance you may be able to relieve some or much of your pain.

I know because thousands of knee arthritis sufferers... just like you... have already found the relief you are looking for.

And even better - this might work for you if your pain is new... or if you have advanced knee arthritis that has made it difficult to even walk.

Here's The Treatment And The Embarrassing Moment

The treatment is called viscosupplemtation. If you have not heard of this treatment - I will explain how it might help you in just a moment. If you have heard of it - or even had this treatment without good results - this information is a "must read."

Here is why: When you have arthritis, one of the things that happens is the lubricating fluid in your joints deceases. This causes joint surfaces to rub, then grind against each other which causes swelling and pain eventually eating way at the cartilage.

Researchers have developed a natural lubricating gel that can be placed in the arthritic knee joint - this cushions and coats the joint allowing it to glide more smoothly which often decreases pain. Sometimes dramatically . Treatment with this special lubricating gel is called Viscosupplementation.

Advanced Knee Arthritis Treatment Offers New Hope For Pain Sufferers In New York City

Nothing Spreads The Word Like Caring Doctors and Results - Knee arthritis sufferers have swarmed the OsteoRelief Center in Manhattan, NYC and Norhtern New j Jersey ever since word got out of their advanced medical procedure for knee arthritis

This all sounds great - in theory. But there is a BIG problem with this treatment.

Allow Me To Explain...

While doing research on this treatment, I traveled to a medical clinic in Northern N.J. right outside NYC (they now have clinics in mid town and downtown).. This clinic had an excellent reputation and I got to speak not only with doctors but with several patients who ranted and raved about the results.

Many said they had tried countless other treatments in the past... including viscosupplementation... but nothing worked until they had viscosupplemtation at this clinic.

I was skeptical, so I asked one of the doctors why. How could it be possible that the same treatment that did not work when done elsewhere... was getting results when done here?

His response was honest and a little shocking. And the bottom line was...

"All Doctors Are Human And Sometimes They Mess Up"

I discovered that this treatment must be VERY PRECISE. In other words, the doctor must be very accurate and actually get the lubricating fluid precisely into the arthritic joint space - or the treatment will be rendered useless.

Many doctors do not want to admit it - but it is very easy to miss the joint space and alter the treatment results.

In fact, research shows that doctors doing these types of joint procedures without advanced imaging may miss the joint space as much as 30% of the time.

Technology To The Rescue

Thankfully technology is solving this problem. How? It's making doctors much more accurate and this treatment much more effective.

Advanced imaging is now available that allows doctors to actually see directly into the joint space and watch the treatment. Doctors can see, or check, if the lubricating fluid goes directly into the joint space - or misses.

The doctor knows if the applied treatment has been a success... or failure... INSTANTLY.

The Difference Between Knee Arthritis Treatment?

Should Know... That Might Be Keeping You In Pain

Here's something incredible: I was able to watch many procedures actually being performed and I was shocked at how many times the doctor thought he had perfect placement... but the imaging proved him wrong.

I was amazed how only a fraction of an inch would make the difference between success and failure.

The best thing is: When the procedure was not perfect - because of the imaging - the doctor knew instantly and was able to make the slight change necessary and achieve the results they were looking for hitting the targeted painful knee joint.

"Double Confirmation" For Best Results

That's why the doctors at this clinic have taken it one giant step further to give their patients the best. They do not just use one form of confirmation during treatment - they use two in their "double confirmation" process. This is to ensure patients get the best possible results.

It became clear to me that using this advanced imaging and "double confirmation" process just might be why the doctors at this medical clinic get results when others were not.

What Results Can Be Expected?

Like all medical treatments, the results vary and can not be predicted. But many knee arthritis sufferers get dramatic results. It is not uncommon for patients to either postpone knee replacement surgery for years... or even permanently cancel it.

Who Is This For?

This treatment is not for everyone - but if you qualify you may be able to relieve some or all of your pain. That's why OsteoRelief has a an innovation for you...

Your Invitation

City as canvas

Look up. Summer is the best time to explore New York's new public art.

New York City is full of art. You don't even need to step foot in a museum to encounter masterpieces by Roy Lichtenstein (Times Square subway station), Keith Haring (Crack is Wack Playground in Harlem) and Robert Indiana (that LOVE sign in Midtown).

But come summer, the city becomes a canvas for all sorts of new, engaging experiments with temporary installations sprouting from the Bronx to Queens — many of them formal commissions by the city.

"It's something that sets New York apart," says Jennifer Lantzas, public art coordinator for the NYC Parks Department. "Many cities have well-established public art programs, but most of them focus on permanent works."

Indeed, temporary projects — from the popular Pop-up Pianos to the murals and sculptures that dot the High Line — can breathe new life into old, familiar spaces, ones that New Yorkers often take for granted in our constant hustle and bustle.

"Each time a new public piece gets installed, you get to see a part of New York City through new eyes," says Nicholas Baume, director and chief curator of the Public Art Fund. "It enriches our spaces, surprises us, engages us."

"The best public art gets people to look again," adds Jonathan Kuhn, NYC Parks' director of arts and antiques. "Sometimes the public gets so attached, they'll beg us to keep it."

Doing films that scare you

Adam Scott and Taylor Schilling are having second thoughts in "The Overnight," out now. / THE ORCHARD

Q&A. Adam Scott faces his fears with "The Overnight."

Adam Scott might not have been too thrilled to take on his role in "The Overnight" — playing a young father with a shameful anatomical issue who, along with his wife, ends up spending a wild night with an eccentric set of fellow parents. But when your wife is producing the movie, you kind of just have to go with it.

Did you ask your writer-director if any of this was based on personal experience?
I didn't. Maybe I should've. [Laughs]

Odd sexual encounters aside, how much did this story relate to your own experiences in L.A. as a parent?
I remember, early on, when our first kid was just a year or so old, we were at the park in Silver Lake, and there were a lot of parents and babies there. I remember we heard one mom calling out for her daughter, and we just heard, "Yoko! Yoko!" And we kind of looked at each other like, yeah. We're Silver Lake, how's it going? Here we are.

What were your first reactions to this script?
As an actor, it scared the s— out of me. The subject matter, the nudity — it all kind of made my skin crawl with fear. Mark Duplass gave us the script, like, "We should do this," and we were all in, but I kind of thought — as with any movie you try to get made, you just figure, "Well, there's a 10 percent chance this will happen," and I just figured we would never have to do it. But I have the misfortune of being married to a really good producer, so it ends up getting put together, and we're starting, and I'm just like, "Oh no. I'm going to have to do all of this." But I'm really glad that I did. I think it's a really interesting movie. I think a lot of people will relate to it, especially given where we all are in 2015.

GETTY IMAGES

Where are we, exactly, would you say?
Well, I'm in the United States. [Laughs] Parenting in 2015 is a really particular thing, and being an adult, you kind of spend your 20s exploring and figuring out who you are, and in your 30s, you kind of settle in on what that is, and you put your roots down and have kids, get married — I mean, some people do. I'm just speaking for the people in this movie and myself. And then if that gets turned upside down, where are you? It's a tricky question.

NED EHRBAR

Bonus question

Which was more uncomfortable during shooting, the prosthetic tiny penis or the goatee?
The goatee was kind of controversial. My wife kept questioning it, like, "Are you sure you want this? I mean, people will see the movie, and this will be in the movie." But I felt like I definitely wanted it there.

Night of the living Ashley Greene

Here's Ashley Greene in the relatively early stages of zombiedom in "Burying the Ex," in theaters and on VOD. / RLJE, IMAGE ENTERTAINMENT

Interview. The "Twilight" alum tells us what it's like to play a zombie in "Burying the Ex."

"I feel like I always gravitate toward these crazy characters," Ashley Greene tells us. She's referring to the TV show, "Rogue," she's shooting now, but she's also talking about "Burying the Ex," where the crazy character is Evelyn, a woman accidentally killed then inexplicably revived as a zombie who plagues Max, her ex-boyfriend (Anton Yelchin). It's the latest from "Gremlins"' Joe Dante, and it's also a showcase for the "Twilight" alum to go over the top — though not too over the top.

What draws you to crazy characters?
I don't know. I think it's [that] opposites attract. I hope. It may be because it throws you into that realm of being able to lose yourself in a role and not really worry about coming off as crazy. Because it's so far from who I am, it just takes the pressure off. It's almost like having a split personality.

She's the villain, but whether she's annoying Max before her death or eating people, she's not purely hissable.
I wanted people to be able to relate to her in some sense. I don't want her to be this controlling, unlikable, horrible human being. I didn't want to condone her behavior, but I wanted to understand her reasons for doing what she's doing. A lot of that comes from the insecurity of losing Max and her not realizing that they're just not right for each other.

… Villains aren't generally villains just for the sake of being evil. Generally, there's something that got them there, some underlying issue not being dealt with.

How horrible were the many stages of makeup for you?
I probably wore six different contacts, sometimes two on top of each other. I'm no stranger to contacts because of "Twilight." This was definitely more intense; I'd never had to wear two contacts on top of each other. I don't necessarily enjoy getting up at four in the morning, but I do enjoy getting to set completely transformed. You move differently, and you speak differently. It's very helpful. Taking [the makeup] off was not fun. You work 14 hours, and at the end of the day, you have to sit there for an hour so they can remove the prosthetics from your face. On the other hand, I have a billion pictures because I thought it was so cool what they were able to do with prosthetics.

GETTY IMAGES

One more thing

Joe Dante is a big movie buff. Did you watch all the movies he told you to?

Not yet. They're still on my list. I have made a habit of sitting down to watch more television and more film. When I grew up, there was music in my house. We were only allowed to watch maybe an hour of TV a day. I'm not really programmed to sit down for long periods of time and watch back-to-back films. I've been trying to do it more because, obviously, it's in my best interest. [Laughs] One of my favorite things about being on location is the time to watch and do all the things you say you're going to do. I don't remember what the lightbulb moment was, but I realized, instead of wasting all my energy being upset because I'm sitting for hours twiddling my thumbs, I can learn another language or watch movies I've never watched. You know I've never seen "Body Heat"? I just watched that. I have a movie called "Bound" I've never seen.

Three new spots to try

Tito King's Kitchen at Jimmy's No. 43 / PROVIDED

Going Out. Caffe Dante is back, Le District is fully open, and Jimmy's No. 43 brings in Asian street food.

When Caffe Dante was sold earlier this year, the 100-year-old Greenwich Village restaurant closed with a promise to return in the spring. Well, just a few days before summer arrived, it reopened as Dante, and according to a PR for the restaurant, the new 65-seat space was created through a close collaboration with the former owners.

Besides an interior facelift, the revised menu remains Italian-American with dishes like beef tartare with watercress, cold angel-hair pasta salad and sardine flatbread for summer. Saxon + Parole's Naren Young is on bar duty, curating a list of aperitivos and "signature cocktails inspired by European cafes." There's a small outdoor terrace as well. Dante (79-81 MacDougal St.) is open for dinner at 5 p.m. daily; breakfast and lunch service are coming soon.

Jimmy's No. 43 (3 E. Seventh St., East Village) has always made a point of having interesting food to go with its NYC-focused craft brews. Last week, owner Jimmy Carbone reopened the kitchen with chef (and longtime friend) King Phojanakong (Umi Nom) at the helm. Tito King's Kitchen is serving refined Thai and Filipino street food like crispy pork spring rolls, the Southeast Asian version of Texas fries, called Halo-Halo, smothered in pork, Japanese mayo and bonito flakes. The menu is not all that's new; Carbone also launched new cocktails featuring (of course) local spirits.

The best feature of Brookfield Place's French food hall Le District (200 Vesey St.), its Hudson River-adjacent outdoor terrace, opened over the weekend, and it'll be tough to tear ourselves away from spending the rest of the summer lounging on its rows of couches and bistro chairs. Details of the menu are still being finalized (expect a proper launch early next month), but the ICRAVE-designed, South of France-inspired lounge looks promising as a great addition to the city's waterfront dining options. An extensive rosé menu is available throughout the terrace, which also has several shellfish stations. If you're looking for something more substantial but still want to enjoy the space, part of the terrace is a wraparound patio belonging to Beaubourg Brasserie, which is serving a full dinner menu.

WATCH 'PRIMER' UNTIL YOU GET IT (OR NOT)

Indie classic

'Primer'

Netflix Instant

Few films beg repeat viewings like "Primer," Shane Carruth's 2004 time travel head-scratcher, which is impossible to fully unravel on first viewing, or on fifth viewing, or on 50th viewing. Not that those who've figured the film out have really figured it out. If there's a point to be gleaned from this micro-indie about two amateur scientists who accidentally create a time machine, it's in watching as something that started out as painfully complex spins even more out of control.

David Sullivan and Shane Carruth create a gizmo that may be a time machine in 2004's "Primer." / PROVIDED

How to think like an entrepreneur

HOW TO GET AHEAD

Microfinance heroine Jessica Jackley tells us what she learned from the hundreds of self-starters she's encountered in Africa and beyond.

RAQUEL LANERI
Ⓐ RaquelLaneri
raquel.laneri@metro.us

Jessica Jackley didn't set out to be an entrepreneur. She set out to help people. As a kid, she saved all her pennies to send to hungry children in Africa; she took service trips to Haiti. She even worked and lived in a home for teenage moms while holding down a full-time job at Stanford University. But it wasn't until she heard a lecture by microfinance guru Dr. Muhammad Yunus that she found her calling.

"At the time, I didn't even know it was happening," says Jackley, who started Kiva, a microlending site that matches lenders with entrepreneurs in poor or rural areas, with her husband in 2005. "It didn't feel like, 'Oh look, here I go becoming an entrepreneur.' It felt like I was tackling a specific problem or trying to address a very specific thing in the world that I wanted to change."

Now Kiva is the largest person-to-person microlending website in the world, lending some $720 million in 10 years. And Jackley has learned a lot from the hundreds of entrepreneurs whose businesses — from dressmaking to farming to building to brickmaking — she's helped fund. In her new book, "Clay Water Brick: Finding Inspiration from Entrepreneurs Who Do the Most with the Least," she shares their inspiring stories and gives some advice herself.

"I don't think everyone needs to be an entrepreneur," she tells Metro. "But I do think that everyone can approach life more entrepreneurially." We ask her how.

See opportunity and seize it

"Entrepreneurs do lots of things well, but two pieces are at the heart," says Jackley. "One is seeing opportunity. The next is being able to seize those opportunities and take advantage of them, creating value in the world out of that opportunity."

Take her friend Patrick, who figured out how to make stronger clay bricks from the mud outside his house in Uganda, or Katherine, who figured that the people in her village needed access to fish more than oil and other more readily available foods. "Seeing and seizing opportunity allow you to see the world through a more positive, solution-finding lens."

Don't do it alone

> One big misconception about entrepreneurs is that they can do everything alone. Indeed, Jackley says the earlier you involve your friends, your mentors and your peers in your project, the better off you'll be. "When you share your dreams with others, you allow them to own those dreams for themselves too," she says. "They'll say, 'Yeah I want to see that happen in the world as well.' Those people are good to have by your side in those moments where you get stuck — either in articulating your dreams, tackling a problem or getting funding. It's better to have people on your side before asking something specific of them."

Don't overthink things

There's nothing preventing you from pursuing your goal, says Jackley, whether that's starting a business, writing a book or designing a new app. "We're a really introspective culture, which is a good thing, but what really struck me about the entrepreneurs I met is that they were just rolling up their sleeves and getting things done," says Jackley.

"[Entrepreneur and scholar] Howard Stevenson says entrepreneurship is the pursuit of an opportunity without regard to resources you already have," she adds. "That's what I saw again and again in East Africa. They didn't wait to have the resources to launch something — they went ahead and did it themselves."

Dream as big as possible

Most of us scale down our goals, managing expectations so we aren't disappointed. Yet, says Jackley, entrepreneurs aren't afraid to go big, even if it results in failure.

"It's easy to have daydreams and think, 'Maybe this will happen one day,'" says Jackley. "But there is so much that's possible — so much to do in the world. I really didn't know how big one individual's actions could be until Kiva surpassed my wildest dreams. Now, I'm getting really serious about dreaming big."

Mind the gap

We can think of worse ways to spend your gap year than climbing Machu Picchu. LONELY PLANET

Thinking of taking some time away from the books before heading into college? Robin Barton, editor of Lonely Planet's "The Big Trip," says you're not alone.

"People are seeing gap years not as an excuse to party but as a part of personal growth," Barton says. "You can volunteer. You can teach. You can do all sorts of things. You can simply travel and work if that's what you want to do."

But what to do with all that time off? We've outlined some ideas below so you'll know exactly where to go and what to do.

Take a course

Want to immerse yourself in a country? Taking a language or cultural course is an easy way to do so.

"It can be an enjoyable way of experiencing a foreign country because you'll be socializing with fellow students," says Barton. "It won't all be study. You'll find time to explore."

Try Cactus Language, which offers "language holidays" like Language and Gastronomy in Italy, or OISE Language Coaching, which features homestays in Heidelberg, Madrid and Paris.

You can just wing it too: Land in any country,

Not just for partying

Ninety percent of gap year-goers said it helped them become more mature while 93 percent said it helped them improve their communication skills. A 2014 study at Middlebury College showed that students who took a gap year actually did better than their predicted academic performance during all four years of college.

and you'll likely discover classes through local listings upon arrival.

Go for the jugular

One way to get the adrenaline rush you've been missing during your study sessions in the library is an adventure trip. From national park hopping to surfing in Indonesia, the options are endless.

Or try the "festival circuit" and branch out from the usual Carnaval with something like the religious Mevlana Festival in Turkey or Hong Kong's Dragon Boat Festival.

But beware: It can get expensive. "Book as far ahead as possible, before your options have dwindled," Barton advises.

Invest time in others

If you're scared to go it totally alone, try an organized volunteer program. United Planet, for example, has opportunities in everything from public health to farm work in 32 countries, giving travelers hands-on experience and structure.

Nongovernmental organizations and charities offer a more immersive volunteering experience with longer commitments — though you may receive less support.

Look for a program with "transparent financial structures and minimal administration costs."

Go with the flow

Still having trouble committing? That's OK. The beauty of the gap year is that you have the freedom to explore it all.

"Part of the pleasure of the gap year is mixing it up a bit and doing different things. You can go to Europe for two months and save money to spend the next three months on a beach in Thailand," Barton says.

Rather stick around?

Taking a gap year doesn't necessarily mean you have to travel the world either. You can volunteer in your own community, find a job or internship in another state or road trip across the country.

"There's such diversity in a single country that you can certainly have a varied experience right on your doorstep," Barton says.

Do away with the rebel flag

In Charleston, the U.S. flag and the state flag of South Carolina were lowered to half staff in respect for the shooting victims. But the Confederate flag continues to fly and is not even lowered to show some respect for the victims. The Confederate flag needs to be completely removed and sent to a museum before there is any further talk about forgiveness for the shooter for whom the Confederate flag was his treasured racist symbol. For forgiveness to be truly meaningful there needs to be repentance or a visible turning away from the attitudes and symbols that motivated the shooter.

GEORGE CHRISTIAN JR., VIA EMAIL

The U.S., once a great country, has lost its soul and direction. We are at war with ourselves. To quote President Lincoln: We are a "house divided" — a society of division. We are made up of red states and blue states, not a United States. We are at war against women, blacks, Christians and Muslims, and the police and race relations are at an all-time low. We have become a nation of hate not tolerance. We marginalize everyone who thinks and looks differently than us. There will be no peace in our society because the media and many others want this chaos and divisiveness to continue. The media knows exactly when to throw gasoline on a volatile situation like Baltimore and Ferguson and create more turmoil.

It gets real: USA women begin knockout round

World Cup. The U.S. women face elimination tonight, but also a winnable round-of-16 battle against Colombia.

A full-strength Alex Morgan is a big boost for the United States' offense. / GETTY IMAGES

Now it starts to gets real for the U.S. women's national team at the 2015 World Cup in Canada as they have reached the round-of-16 (aka single elimination). The team faces Colombia on Monday (8 p.m., Fox Sports 1). The winner advances to take on China on June 30 while the loser is eliminated and goes home.

There is no way to tip toe around the fact that a loss to Colombia would be a colossal failure for the United States. The U.S. (2-0-1) won Group D which was unquestionably the deepest while Colombia (1-1-1) squeaked in thanks to a third-place finish in Group F. Team USA is a heavy favorite.

Even though they beat Nigeria 1-0 to wrap up group play on Tuesday, questions still linger about the Americans' uneven offensive attack.

"I'm happy with the way that we played with and without the ball," said U.S. head coach Jill Ellis. "We can attack with confidence if we have a good backline. It's a shame that we only scored one goal but we've very happy to finish at the top of a difficult group."

Something that American fans can feel confident about is the U.S. defense and goalkeeper Hope Solo, which have allowed just one goal (in the first match vs. Australia) in over 270 minutes of action.

Defender Julie Johnston was one of the more unknown players on the 23-woman roster coming into the World Cup but she has become one of their breakout stars, covering tons of area all over the field including a beautiful recovery run to quell a Nigerian breakaway attempt.

Abby Wambach and Alex Morgan were finally reunited in the starting lineup against Nigeria and Wambach delivered the game-winning goal: a brilliant volley off a Megan Rapinoe corner kick in the dying seconds of the first half.

It was Wambach's 14th goal all-time in the World Cup (tied for 2nd) and that could go a long way to getting her form back after she went scoreless vs. Australia and Sweden.

Midfielder Tobin Heath also earned her first start as Ellis went with a more offensive starting 11. Morgan played for 66 minutes (by far her longest stint of the first three matches) and she noted this weekend that she could go for longer against Colombia.

The opponent

For what it's worth, Colombia came to Canada as the 28th-ranked team by FIFA.

- They opened with a 1-1 draw against Mexico, they scored a 2-0 upset win over France (the most stunning result in group play) and fell 2-1 to England.
- As those results show, they certainly have the talent to make this competitive, but if the U.S. shows up, this shouldn't be too tall of a task.

Yankees blown out in finale

The Yankees' win-streak ended in a big way Sunday as J.D. Martinez blasted three homers for the Tigers, leaving Masahiro Tanaka and New York in the dust. The Bombers return to the Bronx on Monday to begin a three-game set against the Phillies.

Mets' Parnell makes most of opportunities

MLB. The Mets seem to be able to keep finding potent arms for their bullpen.

It had been nearly two years since Bobby Parnell picked up a save in a major league game, but when the Mets' former closer got the chance to shut the door on Tuesday night against the Blue Jays, Parnell seized the moment.

With the bases loaded and the Mets clinging to a one-run lead in the eighth inning, Parnell was summoned from the bullpen. It would be just his third appearance in the majors since 2014, and by far the most difficult situation he faced in that span. But Parnell met the challenge and recorded the final five outs as the Mets tallied another win in what has been a positive season, but one replete with players fighting or recovering from injuries, Parnell included.

Parnell had missed all of August and September of 2013 with a herniated disk in his neck, then in the opening game of the season in 2014 Parnell had to leave early. He was later diagnosed with a torn UCL that required Tommy John surgery. Parnell missed a whole year and his rehab went along slowly, with Parnell not making a rehab start until May of this year (the original timetable called for Parnell to rejoin the Mets in late April). The Mets were shorthanded in the pen after Erik Goeddel was placed on the DL with an elbow strain, the Mets decided to see if Parnell was ready to face major league hitting again.

By the numbers

Things didn't go so smoothly for Parnell in the minors, as the hurler went 0-4 with an 11.57 ERA in 14 innings.

Parnell's first appearance of 2015 came on Saturday, June 13 against the Braves, and Parnell threw just four pitches, surrendering one hit and recording one out. The next day Parnell got one full inning of work but threw just nine pitches; he walked one man but that batter would be a casualty of an inning-ending double play that Parnell induced.

Parnell allowed just one hit in his 1.2 innings of relief work on Tuesday; he walked none and struck out two on 25 pitches.

But with Jeurys Familia pitching like he has all season and Jenrry Mejia returning in about three weeks, Parnell won't be nearly as vital to the Mets as he once was. But the lack of pressure could help him get back to his old self and should something go awry with another reliever Parnell could be poised to step right in.

It's worth noting that Parnell's velocity is way down from the high-90's he was hurling in his prime (his fastball sat at about 92 in his rehab starts and with the major league club). It remains to be seen if Parnell can recapture the velocity he had a few years ago, or if he will just try to get by and adjust his game.

The Mets' bullpen has been solid all season long. / GETTY IMAGES
